Opening Hymn #388 "Dona Nobis Pacem"

Dona nobis pacem, pacem;
dona nobis pacem.

Closing Hymn "What Will You Make?"

At the start of any given day
There is mystery available
There is a game waiting for an open heart
To say "Yes, here I am, I'll play"

And if we're smart we'll listen to the weight
Of all the misery that held us down
We'll let it fade, let it be outshined by a simple spark
Of a life that's waiting to be made, it's waiting to be made

What will you make of this day? What will you keep, what will you change?
What will you see? What will you be?
What will you make of your dreams? Will you keep sleeping
Or will you awake and then decide what you will make?

At the start of any given day
There is history and poetry
There is a play – but you're not in the audience
You are the star! So get out there and say what you will make

What will you make of this day? What will you keep, what will you change?
What will you see? What will you be?
What will you make of your dreams? Will you keep sleeping
Or will you awake and then decide what you will make?

This day – what will you keep? What will you change?
What will you see? What will you be?
What will you make of your dreams? Will you keep sleeping
Or will you awake and then decide what you will make?
